A hilarious and heartwarming memoir about four Jewish guys who join a firehouse in the Deep South.

In the small town of Abbeville, Alabama, there's a firehouse that's unlike any other. It's home to four Jewish guys: Mike, Steve, David, and Jonathan. They're the only Jewish firefighters in the town, and they're also the only Jews in the entire county.

Mike, Steve, David, and Jonathan are all from different backgrounds. Mike is a former Marine who grew up in a small town in New York. Steve is a lawyer who moved to Abbeville from Atlanta. David is a doctor who grew up in a large Jewish community in Miami. And Jonathan is a rabbi who moved to Abbeville from New York City.

Despite their different backgrounds, Mike, Steve, David, and Jonathan have one thing in common: they're all passionate about firefighting. They joined the Abbeville Fire Department because they wanted to help their community. And despite the fact that they're the only Jews in town, they've been welcomed with open arms by their fellow firefighters.

Fish Out of Water is a hilarious and heartwarming memoir about four Jewish guys who find their place in a small town in the Deep South. It's a story about friendship, community, and the power of laughter.

Praise for Fish Out of Water

"Fish Out of Water is a delightful and heartwarming memoir. I laughed out loud many times, and I was also deeply moved by the story of these four Jewish guys who find their place in a small town in the Deep South. This book is a must-read for anyone who loves a good story about friendship, community, and the power of laughter."
